

Cognitive Functions

Cognitive functions are the technical term for “Modes of processing information and making decisions based on your Myers-Briggs type.” Each type has four (out of a possible eight) cognitive functions, which they use in a specific order. Identifying which functions you use – and in what order – is the most accurate way to type yourself or anyone else.

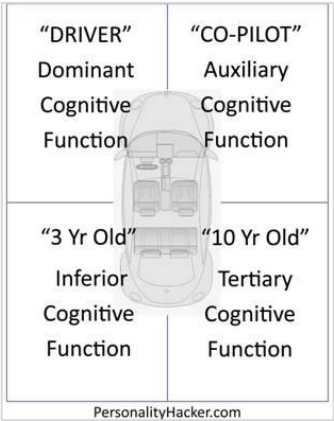

ENFP Functions ENFP Primary Processes

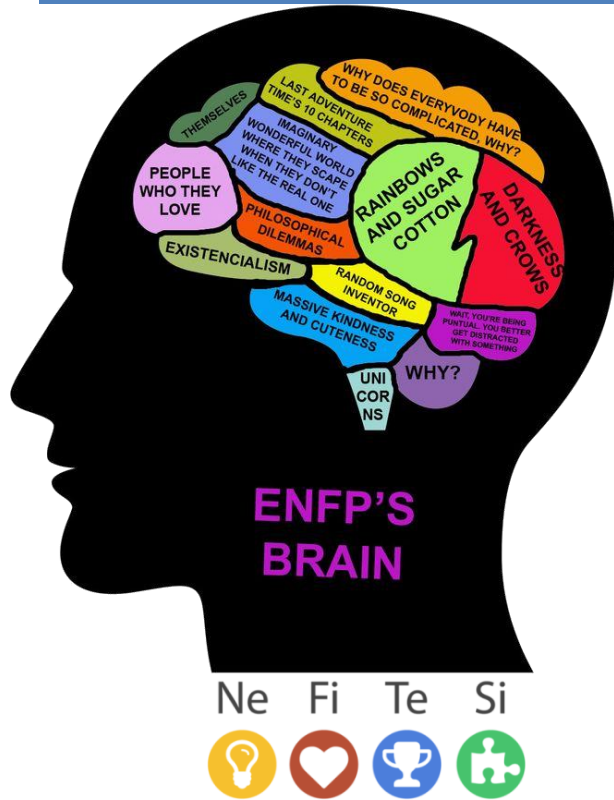

| Role                         | Process               | Snapshot                                                                                             |
|------------------------------|-----------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Leading“Driver”          | Extroverted iNtuition | Interpreting situations and relationships and pickup meanings and interconnections to other contexts |
| Supportive“Co-Pilot”     | Introverted Feeling   | Valuing and considering importance, beliefs, and worth                                               |
| Relief“10 year old”      | Extroverted Thinking  | Segmenting, organising for efficiency, and systematising                                             |
| Aspirational“3 year old” | Introverted Sensing   | Reviewing and recalling past experiences and seeking detailed data                                   |

The analogy of a car is a useful model when thinking about cognitive functions. The first function is the ‘driver’ of the personality type and is the function from which perspective of all of the other functions follow. It provides the direction and speed. The second function is the ‘co-pilot’, which navigates around or through any difficulties encountered. The inferior, or 3 year old, function attempts to distract both primary and secondary functions whereas the tertiary function, or ‘10 year old’, only distracts the current dominant function.

Understanding cognitive functions is imperative to understanding type. The four-letter dichotomies cannot possibly explain the complexity of our personalities – we are all thinkers, feelers, sensors and intuitives in various situations. The cognitive functions allow us to understand when we use each function and how it impacts our decision-making process.

The Cognitive Functions

| Role | Process               | Snapshot                                          |
|------|-----------------------|---------------------------------------------------|
| Ne   | Extroverted Intuition | How do concepts happen outside me?                |
| Ni   | Introverted Intuition | How do concepts happen within me?                 |
| Fe   | Extroverted Feeling   | How does this make others feel?                   |
| Fi   | Introverted Feeling   | Experiencing and acting in the immediate context. |
| Te   | Extroverted Thinking  | How does this logically affect things.            |
| Ti   | Introverted Thinking  | How does this logically affect me?                |
| Se   | Extroverted Sensing   | How is the environment outside me?                |
| Si   | Introverted Sensing   | How is the environment inside me?                 |

CONCLUSION

ENFP Advocates place high value on authenticity. They yearn for genuine soul-to-soul relationships. They are good listeners and desire to understand others.

Their greatest contribution is their ability to inspire and motivate others with their enthusiasm and passion for life.

What is MBTI?

Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI) is a tool that helps people gain insights about themselves and how they interact with others—and improve how they communicate, learn, and work.

Often referred to as a ‘personality test’, MBTI actually has less to do with one’s personality and everything to do with how their brain works from receiving and processing external information to communication preferences. These preferences are split into four pairs – I/E, S/N, F/T and J/P. Though everyone is unique and will have some traits of all 8 letters, people will often be more inclined towards one letter in each pair. By determining your preference in each group, and putting these four letters together, you get your personality type code – for you, this is ENFP.

ENFP – The Advocate

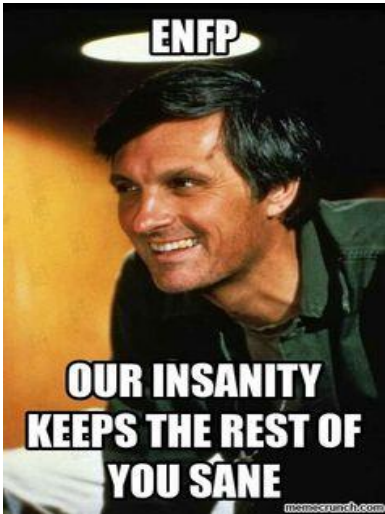

What does that mean?

- Extroverted Energised by time with others
- iNtuition Focus on ideas and concepts
- Feeling Prioritises people and emotions
- Perceiving Prefers freedom and flexibility

The ENFP personality is a true free spirit. They are often the life of the party, and enjoy the social and emotional connections they make with others.

ENFPs are people-centred creators with a focus on possibilities and a contagious enthusiasm for new ideas, people and activities. Energetic, warm, and passionate, ENFPs love to help other people explore their creative potential.

ENFPs are typically agile and expressive communicators, using their wit, humour, and mastery of language to create engaging stories. Imaginative and original, ENFPs often have a strong artistic side. They are drawn to art because of its ability to express inventive ideas and create a deeper understanding of human experience.

ENFP tend to be curious about others and preoccupied with discovering the deeper meaning in people and ideas. They want authentic experience and often seek emotional intensity. ENFPs are easily bored by details and repetition and seek out situations that offer an escape from the mundane. Novelty is attractive to ENFPs, who often have a wide range of interests and friends from many backgrounds.

ENFPs prize individuality and often consider the pursuit of happiness to be the highest priority in life, both for themselves and for others. They place great importance on personal freedom and self-expression, and want to be able to go wherever inspiration leads.

Strengths

- Curious – ENFPs are imaginative and open-minded, seeing all things as part of a big, mysterious puzzle called life.
- Observant – ENFPs believe that there are no irrelevant actions, that every shift in sentiment, every move and every idea is part of something bigger.
- Energetic and Enthusiastic – As they observe, forming new connections and ideas, ENFPs won’t hold their tongues – they’re excited about their findings, and share them with anyone who’ll listen.
- Excellent Communicators – ENFPs have strong people skills, and enjoy both small talk and deep, meaningful conversations.
- Know How to Relax –ENFPs know that sometimes nothing is as important as simply having fun and experiencing life’s joys.
- Very Popular and Friendly – ENFPs are approachable, interesting and exciting, with a cooperative and altruistic spirit and friendly, empathetic disposition. ENFPs get along with pretty much everyone, and their circles of friends stretch far and wide.

Weaknesses

- Poor Practical Skills – When it comes to conceiving ideas and starting projects, ENFPs have exceptional talent. Unfortunately their skill with upkeep, administration, and follow-through on those projects struggles.
- Find it Difficult to Focus – ENFPs find it hard to maintain interest in routine, administrative matters.
- Overthink Things – ENFPs don’t take things at face value – they look for underlying motives in even the simplest things.
- Get Stressed Easily –ENFPs are very sensitive, and care deeply about others’ feelings. They sometimes get overwhelmed, especially when they can’t say yes to every request.
- Highly Emotional – While emotional expression is healthy and natural, for ENFPs it can come out strongly enough to cause problems for this personality type, particularly when under stress, criticism or conflict.
- Independent to a Fault – ENFPs loathe being micromanaged and restrained by heavy-handed rules – they want to be seen as highly independent masters of their own fates.

Recognising the ENFP

ENFPs love to talk about people: not just the facts, but what motivates them, what inspires them, and what they envision achieving in life. They'll often share their own aspirations freely, and want to hear others' in return. The ENFP is unlikely to judge anyone's dream, and will discuss the most imaginative and outlandish of fantasies with warm, enthusiastic intensity. They love to explore creative possibilities, and nothing deflates them faster than talking about dry facts or harsh reality.

ENFPs often seem unconventional, and may come off as scattered; they don't tend to be in touch with their physical surroundings. They often overlook the details, as they are more likely to focus on connecting with other people or on exploring their own imagination and self-expression. They have little patience for the mundane and want to experience life with intensity and flair. ENFPs often have an artistic streak, and may be artistic in appearance. Many have developed a distinctive and quirky personal style.

WHEN PEOPLE TELL ME "YOU'RE GONNA REGRET THAT IN THE MORNING" I SLEEP IN UNTIL NOON BECAUSE I'M A PROBLEM SOLVER.

Career

ENFPs seek fulfilling jobs. They generate endless ideas and are able to communicate them with great passion and enthusiasm. They see themselves as facilitators who appreciate the goodness of others. They bring vision, intuition and meaning to the workplace. They need autonomy and an outlet for their many talents. They wither in monotonous environments.

As subordinates: ENFPs are growth-oriented, and as subordinates they'll impress their managers with their creativity and adaptability. People with the ENFP personality type are excellent listeners, able to analyse and understand others' perspectives effortlessly. It's perhaps this quality that most makes ENFPs intolerant of micromanagement.

As colleagues: ENFPs are people-people, and as far as the workplace is concerned, this quality shows through best among colleagues. More than just co-workers, ENFPs view their colleagues as friends, people who they take a genuine interest in, providing support and cheer when they're down or stressed.

As managers: Not great fans of heavy hierarchy and bureaucracy, ENFPs behave much like they do as colleagues – they establish real friendships, and use their broad popularity to inspire and motivate, taking on the role of leader, working alongside their subordinates, rather than shouting from behind their desks.

Career Matches

- Administrator
- Journalist
- Social Worker
- Conference Planner
- Diplomat
- Writer
- Nurse
- Public Relations
- Politician
- Housing Director
- Editor
- Broadcaster/Newscaster
- Teacher/Professor
- Musician
- Lawyer/Attorney
- Counsellor
- Therapist
- Psychologist
- Art Director
- Project Manager
- Artist
- Painter
- Actor/Actress
- Merchandise Planner
- Speech Pathologist
- Entrepreneur
- Dietitian/Nutritionist
- Human Resources
- Occupational Therapist
- Social Scientist

Popular ENFP hobbies

- Writing
- Creating and appreciating art
- Playing musical instruments
- Listening to music
- Participating in community theatre
- Reading fiction

Relationships

ENFPs romanticise and idealise their relationships. ENFP relationships are a joyous process of mutual exploration and imagination, a chance to connect with another soul. ENFPs take their relationships seriously, and are known for their uninhibited and unshakeable devotion to the people to whom they've committed their hearts; they give everything of themselves and expect to be supported and nurtured in return. Their quest for magic in relationships often leaves them feeling unsatisfied.

As friends, ENFPs are cheerful and supportive, always sharing and developing ideas, and staying open-minded, taking in others' thoughts and feelings. This warmth and sincerity makes people with the ENFP personality type masters of drawing people out of their shells, and as a result they tend to have a huge circle of friends.

Kindred spirits:

INFP, ENTP, ENFJ

Intriguing differences:

INTP, INFJ, ESFP, ENTJ

ISTP, ISTJ, ISFJ and ESTJ personalities can clash and conflict with the ENFP, but may also offer the best opportunities for growth. With fundamentally different values and motivations, their strengths are the ENFP's weaknesses, and if they are able to develop a relationship, they can learn a tremendous amount from each other.

Burnout

ENFPs will become burnt out and overwhelmed if:

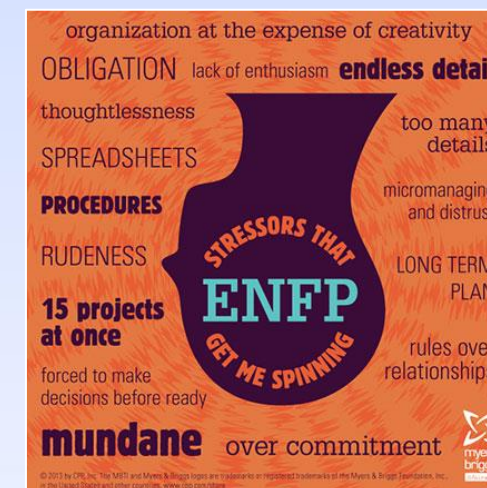

- they overexert themselves, especially in their work life.
- they push hard to give more than 100%

ENFPs don't really like doing anything with partial effort. They put their hearts into everything. They often begin a job, school, or hobby with excitement and energy- which causes them to do very well for a while. But then the ENFP becomes exhausted with this, and finds themselves feeling like they cannot go on like they have been.

When this happens, the ENFP will often require a lot of relaxation time, but this can be misunderstood by others. They simply need to find a way to continue their required paths, without exhausting themselves. Taking enough time to relax and do the things they enjoy, without pushing too hard- is extremely necessary for the ENFP.

ENFP Stressors

Change

ENFPs enjoy certain aspects of change, mostly they enjoy change that they personally initiate. They want to seek excitement in life, which often means taking risks and making changes. The ENFP often does not enjoy when change is enforced on them, because that feels somewhat limiting. They want to feel free to make their own changes in life, without having these imposed upon them. They often enjoy a positive change, things like building new friendships or a nice change of scenery. They can often find ways of coping with change that they do not see coming and will try to look on the positive side. Not much can keep the ENFP down, they will attempt to bounce back from whatever change comes their way.

Famous ENFPs

- Franz Joseph Haydn, Composer
- Mark Twain, Writer
- Dr. Seuss, Writer, Cartoonist
- James Dobson, Evangelical Psychologist
- Robin Williams, Actor
- Paul Robeson, Singer, Lawyer, Activist
- Charles Dickens, English Novelist
- Sandra Bullock, Actress
- Sinbad, Actor, Comedian
- Bob Dylan, Singer, Musician

Fictional ENFPs

- Dr. Doug Ross, ER
- Balki, Perfect Strangers
- Wendy, Peter Pan
- Bridget Jones, Bridget Jones's Diary
- Will, The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air
- Mr. Keating, Dead Poets Society
- Anakin Skywalker, Star Wars
- Hunter "Patch" Adams, Patch Adams

Your character matches:

Game of Thrones:

Arya Stark

Disney:

Rapunzel
Tangled

What makes ENFPs happy?

- Inspiration.
- Being truly connected to others on a deep and meaningful level.
- Bringing positivity to others, and spreading those warm vibes.
- Being completely comfortable with themselves, and appreciating who they are.
- Having other people appreciate them as well, and feeling like they aren't being judged.
- Sharing honest and sincere dialogue with other people.
- The possibilities and beauty that the world around them possesses.
- Reading.
- Exploration.
- Coffee.
- And maybe a little romance.

