

Cognitive functions are the technical term for “Modes of processing information and making decisions based on your Myers-Briggs type.” Each type has four (out of a possible eight) cognitive functions, which they use in a specific order. Identifying which functions you use – and in what order – is the most accurate way to type yourself or anyone else.

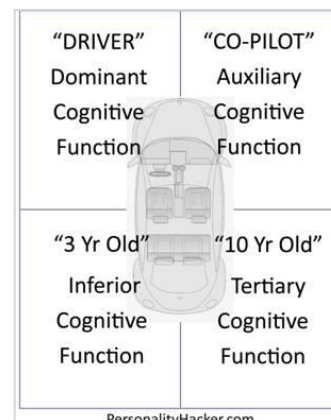

ENTJ Primary Processes

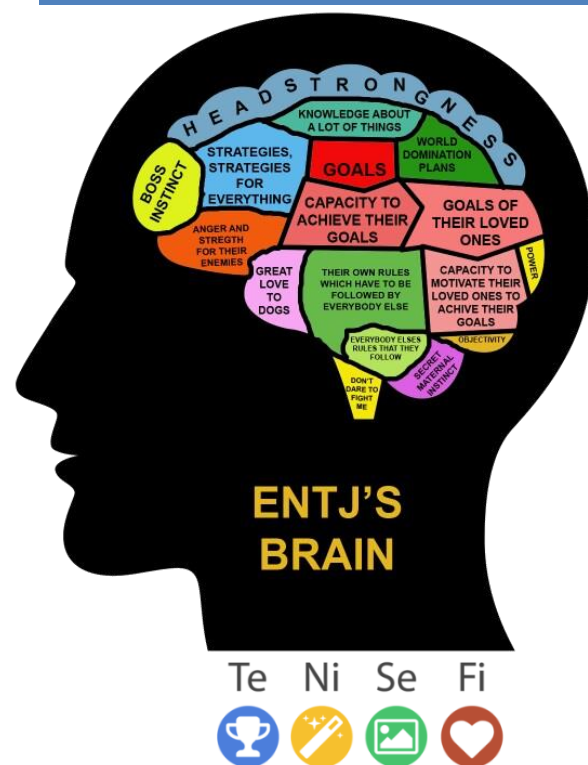

Role	Process	Snapshot
Leading “Driver”	Extroverted Thinking	Segmenting, organising for efficiency, and systematising
Supportive “Co-Pilot”	Introverted iNtuition	Foreseeing implications, transformations, and likely effects
Relief “10 year old”	Extroverted Sensing	Experiencing and acting in the immediate context.
Aspirational “3 year old”	Introverted Feeling	Valuing and considering importance, beliefs, and worth

The analogy of a car is a useful model when thinking about cognitive functions. The first function is the 'driver' of the personality type and is the function from which perspective of all of the other functions follow. It provides the direction and speed. The second function is the 'co-pilot', which navigates around or through any difficulties encountered. The inferior, or 3 year old, function attempts to distract both primary and secondary functions whereas the tertiary function, or '10 year old', only distracts the current dominant function.

Understanding cognitive functions is imperative to understanding type. The four-letter dichotomies cannot possibly explain the complexity of our personalities – we are all thinkers, feelers, sensors and intuitives in various situations. The cognitive functions allow us to understand when we use each function and how it impacts our decision-making process.

The Cognitive Functions

Role	Process	Snapshot
Ne	Extroverted Intuition	How do concepts happen outside me?
Ni	Introverted Intuition	How do concepts happen within me?
Fe	Extroverted Feeling	How does this make others feel?
Fi	Introverted Feeling	Experiencing and acting in the immediate context.
Te	Extroverted Thinking	How does this logically affect things?
Ti	Introverted Thinking	How does this logically affect me?
Se	Extroverted Sensing	How is the environment outside me?
Si	Introverted Sensing	How is the environment inside me?

CONCLUSION

ENTJ Chiefs are on a constant quest to improve themselves. They often invite those around them to improve themselves as well. They are gifted strategists.

Their greatest contribution is their ability to lead confidently and reach goals with excellence.

What is MBTI?

Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI) is a tool that helps people gain insights about themselves and how they interact with others—and improve how they communicate, learn, and work.

Often referred to as a 'personality test', MBTI actually has less to do with one's personality and everything to do with how their brain works from receiving and processing external information to communication preferences. These preferences are split into four pairs – I/E, S/N, F/T and J/P. Though everyone is unique and will have some traits of all 8 letters, people will often be more inclined towards one letter in each pair. By determining your preference in each group, and putting these four letters together, you get your personality type code – for you, this is ENTJ.

ENTJ – The Commander

What does that mean?

E xtraverted	Energised by being with others
i ntuition	Focus on ideas and concepts
T hinking	Prioritises logic and reason
J udging	Prefers structure and order

ENTJs are natural-born leaders, charisma and confidence, and ability to project authority in a way that draws crowds together behind a common goal. But unlike their Feeling (F) counterpart, ENTJs are characterised by an often ruthless level of rationality, using their drive, determination and sharp minds to achieve whatever end they've set for themselves.

Motivated to organise change, ENTJs are quick to see inefficiency and conceptualise new solutions, and enjoy developing long-range plans to accomplish their vision. They excel at logical reasoning and are usually articulate and quick-witted. ENTJs are assertive and enjoy taking charge; they see their role as that of leader and manager, organising people and processes to achieve their goals.

ENTJs are often very motivated by success in their careers and enjoy hard work. They are ambitious and interested in gaining power and influence. To the ENTJ, decision-making is a vocation. They want to be in a position to make the call and put plans into motion.

ENTJs tend to be blunt and decisive. Driven to get things done, they can sometimes be critical or brusque in the pursuit of a goal. They are typically friendly and outgoing, although they may not pick up on emotional subtleties in other people. They often love working with others toward a common goal, but may not find time to attend to their feelings. They are focused on results and want to be productive, competent, and influential.

Strengths

- Efficient – ENTJs see inefficiency not just as a problem in its own right, but as something that pulls time and energy away from all their future goals, an elaborate sabotage consisting of irrationality and laziness.
- Energetic – ENTJs genuinely enjoy leading their teams forward as they implement their plans and goals.
- Self-Confident – ENTJs trust their abilities, make known their opinions, and believe in their capacities as leaders.
- Strong-Willed – ENTJ personalities strive to achieve their goals, but really nothing is quite as satisfying to them as rising to the challenge of each obstacle in their run to the finish line.
- Strategic Thinkers – ENTJs are known for examining every angle of a problem and not just resolving momentary issues, but moving the whole project forward with their solutions.
- Charismatic and Inspiring – ENTJa are able to inspire and invigorate others, who people actually want to be their leaders, and this in turn helps ENTJs to accomplish their often ambitious goals that could never be finished alone.

Weaknesses

- Stubborn and Dominant – ENTJs are all too capable of digging in their heels, trying to win every single debate and pushing their vision, and theirs alone.
- Intolerant – "It's my way or the highway" – ENTJs are notoriously unsupportive of any idea that distracts from their primary goals, and even more so of ideas based on emotional considerations.
- Impatient – Some people need more time to think than others, an intolerable delay to quick-thinking ENTJs.
- Arrogant – ENTJs respect quick thoughts and firm convictions, their own qualities, and look down on those who don't match up.
- Poor Handling of Emotions – ENTJs can be distant from their own emotional expression and sometimes downright scornful of others'.
- Cold and Ruthless – Their obsession with efficiency and unwavering belief in the merits of rationalism makes ENTJs incredibly insensitive in pursuing their goals, dismissing personal circumstances, sensitivities, and preferences as irrational and irrelevant.

ENTJs are often gregarious, and seem to have an idea for how a person will fit into their grand scheme from the moment they are introduced. They are typically direct and may seem presumptuous or even arrogant; they size people and situations up very quickly, and have trouble being anything but honest about what they see. ENTJs are sensitive to issues of power, and seek positions and people of influence. They are characteristically ambitious, and often very engaged in their careers. More than any other type, ENTJs enjoy their work, and may even say that working is what they do for fun.

As managers: ENTJ managers are confident, charismatic communicators, and they communicate but one vision: to get the job done as efficiently as possible, and to the highest standard of quality. All else is subordinate to that objective, but the means by which ENTJs achieve it cause others to adopt this cause as their own.

In friendship ENTJs seek personal growth and inspiration, and they often have a plan for how to accomplish it. It is not always easy to be ENTJs' friends – they demand a lot from these relationships – but they pay a great deal of attention to their friendships, and it is unlikely that it will ever feel stagnant.

ISTJ, INTP, ENFP, ENFJ

ISFP, ISFJ, INFP and ESFP personalities can clash and conflict with the ENTJ, but may also offer the best opportunities for growth. With fundamentally different values and motivations, their strengths are the ENTJ's weaknesses, and if they are able to develop a relationship, they can learn a tremendous amount from each other.

- they haven't taken time to relax and enjoy some downtime.
- they feel like all of their hard work is going to waste, especially if they aren't yielding rewards as quickly as they would hope.

ENTJs often push themselves extremely hard in order to be successful. They are driven individuals, and are excellent at leading others forward. The ENTJ during their burn out, is likely to be far more emotional than usual. They might become obsessed with making moral decisions, and will find themselves expressing their upset much more readily than usual. The ENTJ simply needs to take some time for themselves, in order to relax and recharge. They need to accept the things that they cannot change, and let go of the stress they are holding onto.

ENTJs often enjoy being able to keep control of their environment. Because of this need for organisation and structure, the ENTJ may become uneasy with change. This entirely depends on the type of change though, since ENTJs do enjoy opportunities to grow. They enjoy being able to take on new and exciting challenges in their lives. They are very skilled at devising strategies and often enjoy the chance to expand their minds. Sometimes change can be welcomed by the ENTJ as a chance to overcome a new challenge. As long as the ENTJ is able to figure out a way through the change that makes for an optimal future, they might actually enjoy it.
