

Cognitive Functions

Cognitive functions are the technical term for “Modes of processing information and making decisions based on your Myers-Briggs type.” Each type has four (out of a possible eight) cognitive functions, which they use in a specific order. Identifying which functions you use – and in what order – is the most accurate way to type yourself or anyone else.

ESTJ Functions

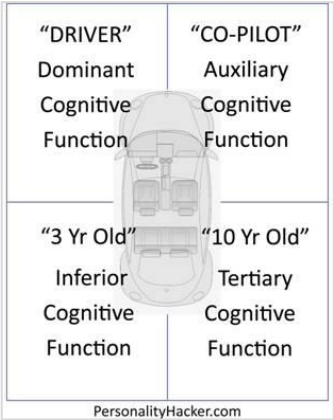

ESTJ Primary Processes

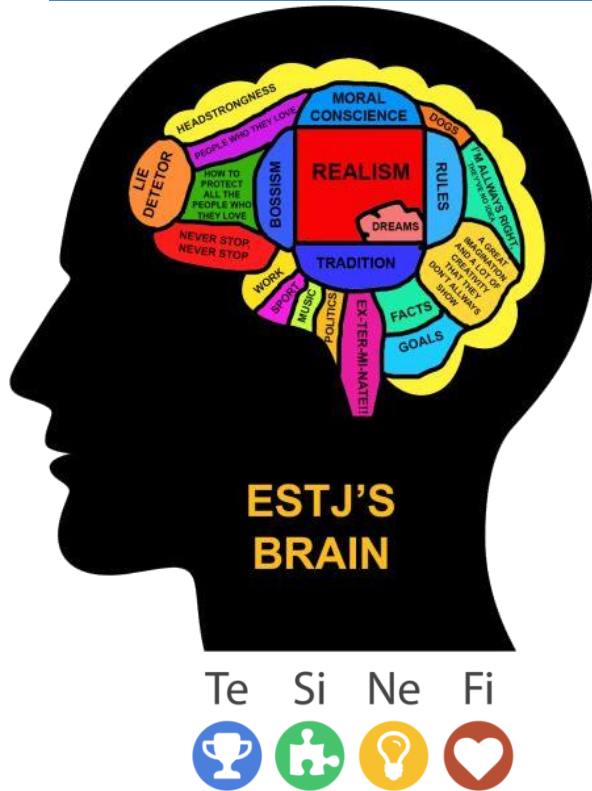

Role	Process	Snapshot
Leading “Driver”	Extroverted Thinking	Segmenting, organising for efficiency, and systematising
Supportive “Co-Pilot”	Introverted Sensing	Reviewing and recalling past experiences and seeking detailed data
Relief “10 year old”	Extroverted iNtuition	Interpreting situations and relationships and pickup meanings and interconnections to other contexts
Aspirational “3 year old”	Introverted Feeling	Valuing and considering importance, beliefs, and worth

The analogy of a car is a useful model when thinking about cognitive functions. The first function is the ‘driver’ of the personality type and is the function from which perspective of all of the other functions follow. It provides the direction and speed. The second function is the ‘co-pilot’, which navigates around or through any difficulties encountered. The inferior, or 3 year old, function attempts to distract both primary and secondary functions whereas the tertiary function, or ‘10 year old’, only distracts the current dominant function.

Understanding cognitive functions is imperative to understanding type. The four-letter dichotomies cannot possibly explain the complexity of our personalities – we are all thinkers, feelers, sensors and intuitives in various situations. The cognitive functions allow us to understand when we use each function and how it impacts our decision-making process.

The Cognitive Functions

Role	Process	Snapshot
Ne	Extroverted Intuition	How do concepts happen outside me?
Ni	Introverted Intuition	How do concepts happen within me?
Fe	Extroverted Feeling	How does this make others feel?
Fi	Introverted Feeling	Experiencing and acting in the immediate context
Te	Extroverted Thinking	How does this logically affect things.
Ti	Introverted Thinking	How does this logically affect me?
Se	Extroverted Sensing	How is the environment outside me?
Si	Introverted Sensing	How is the environment inside me?

CONCLUSION

ESTJ Overseers bring order to chaotic situations. They use common-sense and are down-to-earth. They are industrious and service-oriented. ESTJs enjoy people and like staying connected.

Their greatest contribution is their ability to preserve traditions and provide security for their family and community.

What is MBTI?

Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI) is a tool that helps people gain insights about themselves and how they interact with others—and improve how they communicate, learn, and work.

Often referred to as a ‘personality test’, MBTI actually has less to do with one’s personality and everything to do with how their brain works from receiving and processing external information to communication preferences. These preferences are split into four pairs – I/E, S/N, F/T and J/P. Though everyone is unique and will have some traits of all 8 letters, people will often be more inclined towards one letter in each pair. By determining your preference in each group, and putting these four letters together, you get your personality type code – for you, this is ESTJ.

ESTJ – The Executive

What does that mean?

Extroverted	Energised by time with other
Sensing	Pays attention to facts and details
Thinking	Prioritises logic and reason
Judging	Prefers structure and order

ESTJs are hardworking traditionalists, eager to take charge in organising projects and people. Orderly, rule-abiding, and conscientious, ESTJs like to get things done, and tend to go about projects in a systematic, methodical way. Embracing the values of honesty, dedication and dignity, people with the ESTJ personality type are valued for their clear advice and guidance, and they happily lead the way on difficult paths.

Taking pride in bringing people together, ESTJs often take on roles as community organisers, working hard to bring everyone together in celebration of cherished local events, or in defence of the traditional values that hold families and communities together.

ESTJs are the consummate organisers, and want to bring structure to their surroundings. They value predictability and prefer things to proceed in a logical order. When they see a lack of organisation, the ESTJ often takes the initiative to establish processes and guidelines, so that everyone knows what's expected.

ESTJs are conventional, factual, and grounded in reality. For the ESTJ, the proof is in the past: what has worked and what has been done before. They value evidence over conjecture, and trust their personal experience. ESTJs look for rules to follow and standards to meet, and often take a leadership role in helping other people meet expectations as well. They concern themselves with maintaining the social order and keeping others in line.

Strengths

- Dedicated – Seeing things to completion borders on an ethical obligation for ESTJs.
- Strong-willed –ESTJs don’t give up their beliefs because of simple opposition. ESTJs defend their ideas and principles relentlessly, and must be proven clearly and conclusively wrong for their stance to budge.
- Direct and Honest – ESTJs trust facts far more than abstract ideas or opinions. Straightforward statements and information are king, and ESTJ personalities return the honesty (whether it’s wanted or not).
- Loyal, Patient and Reliable – ESTJs work to exemplify truthfulness and reliability, considering stability and security very important.
- Enjoy Creating Order – Chaos makes things unpredictable, and unpredictable things can’t be trusted when they are needed most – with this in mind, ESTJs strive to create order and security in their environments by establishing rules, structures and clear roles.
- Excellent Organisers –ESTJs have no problem distributing tasks and responsibilities to others fairly and objectively, making them excellent administrators.

Weaknesses

- Inflexible and Stubborn – Everything is opinion until proven, and ESTJ personalities are reluctant to trust an opinion long enough for it to have that chance.
- Uncomfortable with Unconventional Situations – ESTJs are strong adherents to tradition and when suddenly forced to try unvetted solutions, they become uncomfortable and stressed.
- Judgmental – ESTJs have strong convictions about what is right, wrong, and socially acceptable.
- Too Focused on Social Status – ESTJs take pride in the respect of their friends, colleagues and community and while difficult to admit, are very concerned with public opinion.
- Difficult to Relax – It can be difficult for ESTJs to cut loose and relax for risk of looking the fool, even in good fun.
- Difficulty Expressing Emotion – ESTJs get so caught up in the facts and most effective methods that they forget to think of what makes others happy, or of their sensitivity.

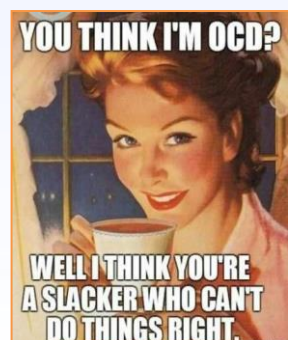

Recognising the ESTJ

ESTJs command a situation, with the sense that they know how things should go and are ready to take charge to make sure that it happens. They are task-oriented and put work before play. Confident and tough-minded, the ESTJ appears almost always to be in control. ESTJs appreciate structure and often begin to organise as soon as they enter a room. They want to establish the ground rules and make sure everyone does what they're supposed to.

ESTJs are often involved in institutions: clubs, associations, societies, and churches, where they usually take a leadership role. They typically connect with others through sharing ritual and routine. Social interaction for ESTJs often means following an established tradition to engage with others in a structured way. ESTJs tend to respect and seek out hierarchy. They want to know who's in charge, and will assign levels of responsibility if none exist.

Once a structure is in place, ESTJs typically trust authority figures and expect obedience from people of lower rank.

Career

ESTJs possess a strong work ethic. They are organised and willing to make sacrifices to accomplish a task. They are committed to excellence and have high expectations of others. ESTJs like being appreciated and recognised. As leaders, they provide continuity and direction. They are energised by tangible results.

As subordinates: ESTJs are hard-working and do things by the book. Though sometimes stubborn and inflexible, especially when presented with ideas that haven't been fully developed, ESTJ personalities are open to new methods that can be demonstrated to be better. However ESTJs are unlikely to do much experimenting on their own – adhering to stated responsibilities and fulfilling their duties is their primary concern.

As colleagues: Honest, friendly and down-to-earth, ESTJs are great networkers who enjoy connecting with others to get things done. Abusing this for advancement something ESTJs frown upon. Shortcuts are irresponsible, and ESTJs lose respect quickly for those who try to push forward by showing off or promoting bold but risky ideas.

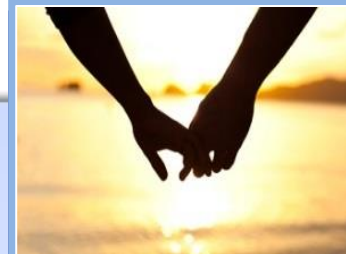

As managers: ESTJs take genuine pleasure in organising others into effective teams, and as managers they have no better opportunity to do so. While sometimes overbearing, even micromanaging, ESTJs' strong wills also serve to defend their teams and principles against diversions and cutbacks, regardless of who brings them. Laziness and bad work ethic are not tolerated by ESTJs under any circumstances.

Relationships

ESTJs are practical, action-oriented communicators, clear about expectations and procedures; they explain the necessary steps as well as how and when tasks should be completed. Because they value honesty and straightforwardness so highly, ESTJs are likely to be clear about who they are, what they're like and what their goals are from the start, and to stick to those statements long-term. So long as their partner is able to take them at their word and follow suit, they are bound to be extremely stable relationships.

ESTJs are strong, traditional friends who appreciate loyalty and shared values. Friendships with the ESTJ personality type are often defined by their mutual activities and routines. ESTJs' friendships of dependability and mutual interest can be powerful connections that endure life's changes with immutable constancy.

ISFP, INTP, INFP and ENFP personalities can clash and conflict with the ESTJ, but may also offer the best opportunities for growth. With fundamentally different values and motivations, their strengths are the ESTJ's weaknesses, and if they are able to develop a relationship, they can learn a tremendous amount from each other.

Burnout

ESTJs are hardworking and will become burnt out and overwhelmed if:

- long periods without stopping to take breaks
- taking on too many different tasks
- they feel like they aren't capable of getting things done fast enough

An ESTJ who is suffering from burn out, won't be as focused and driven as they usually are. They might find themselves completely stagnant and in incapable of moving forward. This is very difficult for ESTJ, especially as they watch their tasks piling up around them. The ESTJ might need to ask for help when this occurs, which is actually very difficult for them to do. If their loved ones can find the time to take care of some of the things the ESTJ needs to get done, it will really help them relax and get back to themselves.

ESTJ Stressors

Change

ESTJs often do not mind if things are changing for the better, but this needs to be clear to them. If the change occurring is negative or unknown, the ESTJ will instantly become stressed. They enjoy maintain control and order in their environment, which change can definitely mess up. The ESTJ wants to be sure of the future, disliking when things are unclear. If the ESTJ is stuck in a rut, they will welcome positive changes to their lives. Other than that they become high-strung and stressed out when change is presented in their lives. ESTJs enjoy having a scheduled and organised life.
