

Cognitive Functions

Cognitive functions are the technical term for “Modes of processing information and making decisions based on your Myers-Briggs type.” Each type has four (out of a possible eight) cognitive functions, which they use in a specific order. Identifying which functions you use – and in what order – is the most accurate way to type yourself or anyone else.

ESTP Functions

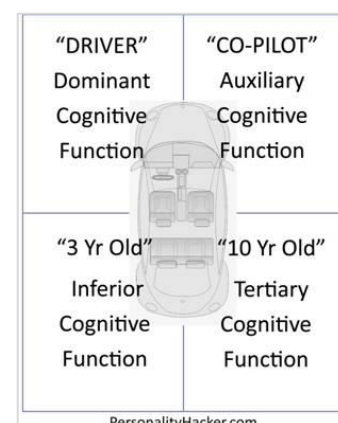

ESTP Primary Processes

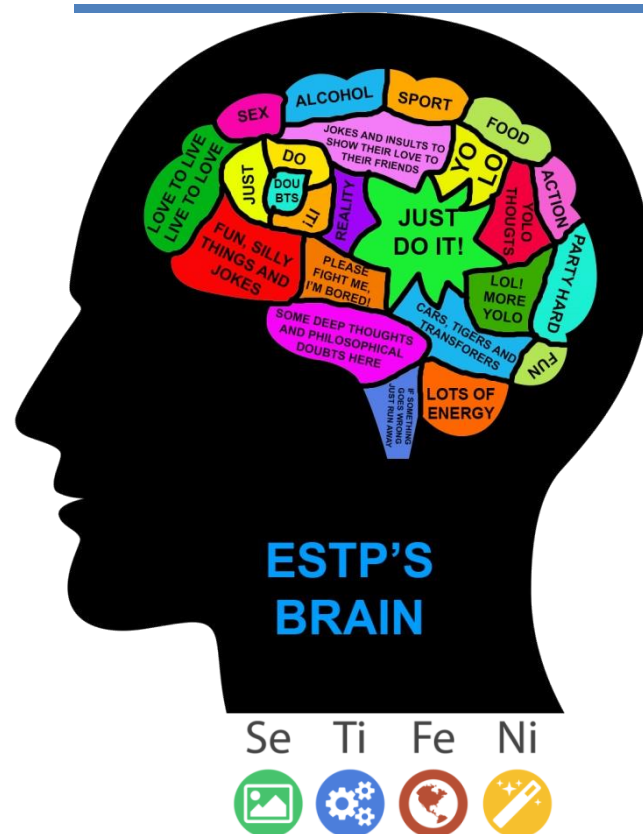

Role	Process	Snapshot
Leading “Driver”	Extroverted Sensing	Experiencing and acting in the immediate context.
Supportive “Co-Pilot”	Introverted Thinking	Analysing, categorising, and evaluating according to principles
Relief “10 year old”	Extroverted Feeling	Connecting and considering others and the group
Aspirational “3 year old”	Introverted iNtuition	Foreseeing implications, transformations, and likely effects

The analogy of a car is a useful model when thinking about cognitive functions. The first function is the ‘driver’ of the personality type and is the function from which perspective of all of the other functions follow. It provides the direction and speed. The second function is the ‘co-pilot’, which navigates around or through any difficulties encountered. The inferior, or 3 year old, function attempts to distract both primary and secondary functions whereas the tertiary function, or ‘10 year old’, only distracts the current dominant function.

Understanding cognitive functions is imperative to understanding type. The four-letter dichotomies cannot possibly explain the complexity of our personalities – we are all thinkers, feelers, sensors and intuitives in various situations. The cognitive functions allow us to understand when we use each function and how it impacts our decision-making process.

The Cognitive Functions

Role	Process	Snapshot
Ne	Extroverted Intuition	How do concepts happen outside me?
Ni	Introverted Intuition	How do concepts happen within me?
Fe	Extroverted Feeling	How does this make others feel?
Fi	Introverted Feeling	Experiencing and acting in the immediate context.
Te	Extroverted Thinking	How does this logically affect things?
Ti	Introverted Thinking	How does this logically affect me?
Se	Extroverted Sensing	How is the environment outside me?
Si	Introverted Sensing	How is the environment inside me?

CONCLUSION

ESTP Persuaders are people-oriented. They are flexible and adaptable in all situations. They are energetic and fun. They are direct and clear and can take the same kind of honesty from others.

Their greatest contribution is their ability to get things done and work well with others.

What is MBTI?

Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI) is a tool that helps people gain insights about themselves and how they interact with others—and improve how they communicate, learn, and work.

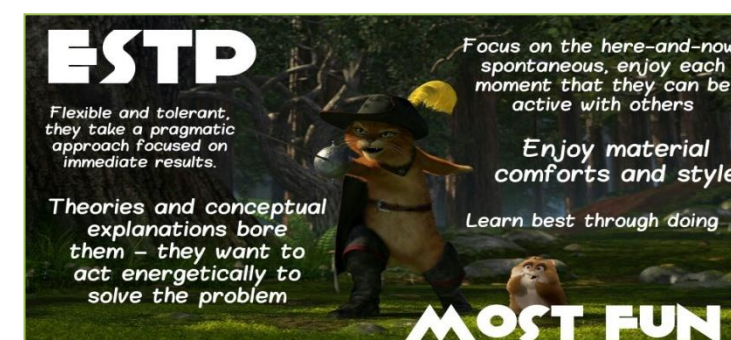

Often referred to as a ‘personality test’, MBTI actually has less to do with one’s personality and everything to do with how their brain works from receiving and processing external information to communication preferences. These preferences are split into four pairs – I/E, S/N, F/T and J/P. Though everyone is unique and will have some traits of all 8 letters, people will often be more inclined towards one letter in each pair. By determining your preference in each group, and putting these four letters together, you get your personality type code – for you, this is ESTP.

ESTP – The Persuader

What does that mean?

Extroverted	Energised by time with others
Sensing	Pays attention to facts and details
Thinking	Prioritises logic and reason
Perceiving	Prefers freedom and flexibility

ESTPs always have an impact on their immediate surroundings – the best way to spot them at a party is to look for the whirling eddy of people flitting about them as they move from group to group. Laughing and entertaining with a blunt and earthy humour, ESTPs love to be the centre of attention. If an audience member is asked to come on stage, ESTPs volunteer – or volunteer a shy friend.

ESTPs are energetic thrill seekers who are at their best when putting out fires, whether literal or metaphorical. They bring a sense of dynamic energy to their interactions with others and the world around them. They assess situations quickly and move adeptly to respond to immediate problems with practical solutions.

Active and playful, ESTPs are often the life of the party and have a good sense of humour. They use their keen powers of observation to assess their audience and adapt quickly to keep interactions exciting. Although they typically appear very social, they are rarely sensitive; the ESTP prefers to keep things fast-paced and silly rather than emotional or serious.

ESTPs are often natural athletes, and like to use this physical aptitude in the pursuit of excitement and adventure; they often enjoy putting their skills to the test in risky or even dangerous activities.

The ESTP's focus is action in the moment. They are engaged with their environments and solve practical problems quickly. ESTPs are excellent in emergencies, when they can apply their logical reasoning to situations where immediate action is necessary. Long-term goals are less interesting to the ESTP, who prefers to see tangible results in the moment.

Strengths

- Bold – People with the ESTP personality type are full of life and energy.
- Rational and Practical – ESTPs love knowledge and philosophy; what's fun for ESTPs is finding ideas that are actionable and drilling into the details so they can put them to use
- Original – ESTPs love to experiment with new ideas and solutions. They put things together in ways no one else would think to.
- Perceptive – This originality is helped by ESTPs' ability to notice when things change – and when they need to change!
- Direct – ESTPs prefer to communicate clearly, with direct and factual questions and answers. Things are what they are.
- Sociable – All these qualities pull together to make a natural group leader in ESTPs. This isn't something that they actively seek – people with this personality type just have a knack for making excellent use of social interactions and networking opportunities.

Weaknesses

- Insensitive – Feelings and emotions come second to facts and “reality” for ESTPs
- Impatient – ESTPs move at their own pace to keep themselves excited.
- Risk-prone – This impatience can lead ESTPs to push into uncharted territory without thinking of the long-term consequences. ESTP personalities sometimes intentionally combat boredom with extra risk.
- Unstructured – ESTPs see an opportunity – to fix a problem, to advance, to have fun – and seize the moment, often ignoring rules and social expectations in the process.
- May Miss the Bigger Picture – Living in the moment can cause ESTPs to miss the forest for the trees.
- Defiant – ESTPs won't be boxed in. Repetition, hardline rules, sitting quietly while they are lectured at – this isn't how ESTPs live their lives. They are action-oriented and hands-on.

Recognising the ESTP

The first thing you notice about the ESTP is likely to be their energy. They're often chatting, joking, and flirting with friends and strangers alike. They enjoy engaging playfully with others and amusing everyone around them with their irreverent sense of humor. They tend to keep people on their toes, never quite knowing what the ESTP will poke fun at next. ESTPs are unabashedly gregarious with people, but their interest in individuals may not last long; they are more likely to work a room, having a laugh with everyone, than they are to engage in depth with any one person.

ESTPs are comfortable in their physical environment and always looking for some action or activity. They tend to be the most naturally coordinated of all the types and are often found playing sports or engaging in various physical activities, especially ones with an element of danger. They are the stereotypical "adrenaline junkies" and may be found skydiving, motorcycle racing, or enjoying other extreme sports.

Career

ESTPs often do well in business. They love the challenge of selling and negotiating. They are driven to achieve what others might consider impossible. They are energised by results and are not slowed down by obstacles. ESTPs are gifted at using the resources they possess in order to achieve their goals.

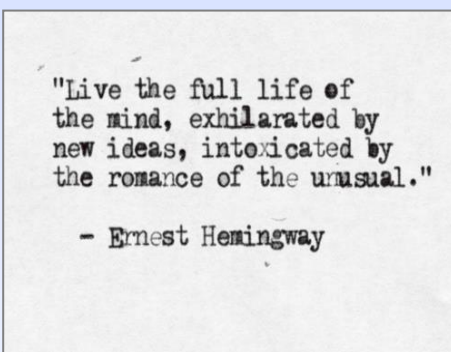

As subordinates: While perfectly capable of exercising restraint on their own terms, ESTP personalities hate having others' rules and regulations foisted upon them. ESTPs are known for their experimentation, improvisation and quick thinking – if they're not allowed to use these qualities and have to check in with a supervisor for every little thing, they'll be bored and frustrated.

As colleagues: ESTPs have a work hard, play hard mentality – as long as everyone else is pulling their weight, they'll gladly pull their own, and have a great time doing it. Charming and popular individuals that they are, networking comes naturally to ESTPs. These qualities make it easy for ESTP personalities to get along with just about anyone.

As managers: Management positions are where ESTPs are usually most comfortable, as they often give the most flexibility. Rules and traditions are a bother for ESTPs – they'd rather try a bunch of new ideas with a chance of getting things done faster or better than to pay attention to "the way things have always been done" or subordinates' comfort with experimentation. ESTPs are practical, with a focus on what does, or could, work best.

Relationships

ESTPs have an uncanny ability to read other people's nonverbal communication and to anticipate what others will say and do. They are very adept at winning others over. Generous, likeable and humorous, ESTPs are drawn to people they can have fun with and talk to. They are good at getting people to do what they want.

Romantically, ESTPs can hardly be said to be pining away for their wedding day. Life is fun and full of surprises, and they enjoy it all in the here and now. ESTPs may not spend a lot of time planning for "someday", but their enthusiasm and unpredictability make them thrilling dating partners.

With an enviable imagination and invigorating sense of spontaneity, ESTPs are never boring. They love exploring interesting ideas, both in discussion and by going out and seeing for themselves, which means that ESTPs always seem to have some fun activity hidden up their sleeves.

Intriguing differences:

ISFJ, INTP, INFP and INFJ personalities can clash and conflict with the ESTP, but may also offer the best opportunities for growth. With fundamentally different values and motivations, their strengths are the ESTP's weaknesses, and if they are able to develop a relationship, they can learn a tremendous amount from each other.

Burnout

ESTPs will become burnt out and overwhelmed if:

- they take on too many tasks, in an effort to get things done faster
- attempting to juggle their work and social life

The ESTP who is burnt out, will not be their usual fun-loving self. They might attempt to follow a fixed schedule for a while, in order to mend things. This ultimately will push the ESTP into their burn out, and they will be seen as stagnant and incapable of getting things done. Certain tasks might fall behind in the ESTPs life, and they will find it hard to push forward. The ESTP needs to let go of the pressure they are placing on themselves, and find a way to accept their situation. They will likely get through much better than they expect, so stressing is only going to make things worse for them than it truly needs to be.

ESTP Stressors

Change

ESTPs don't mind certain kinds of change in their lives. They enjoy being able to be excited, often seeking out new thrills. As long as the change does not hold them back in any way, the ESTP will be excited by it. They enjoy being able to experience new things, taking in all that their surroundings have to offer. ESTPs dislike staying stagnant more than anything, making change an often welcomed experience. They will often attempt to see the positives that life has to offer, finding ways to navigate whatever change comes their way. Being able to meet new people, or see new places is something that the ESTP finds themselves intrigued by.
