

Cognitive Functions

Cognitive functions are the technical term for “Modes of processing information and making decisions based on your Myers-Briggs type.” Each type has four (out of a possible eight) cognitive functions, which they use in a specific order. Identifying which functions you use – and in what order – is the most accurate way to type yourself or anyone else.

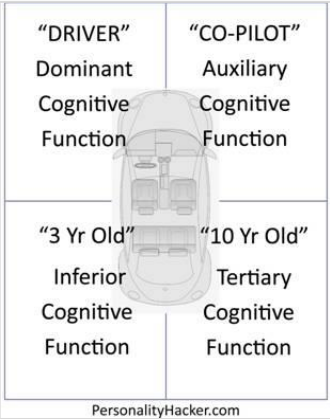

ISFP Functions ISFP Primary Processes

Role	Process	Snapshot
Leading “Driver”	Introverted Feeling	Valuing and considering importance, beliefs, and worth
Supportive “Co-Pilot”	Extroverted Sensing	Experiencing and acting in the immediate context.
Relief “10 year old”	Introverted iNtuition	Foreseeing implications, transformations, and likely effects
Aspirational “3 year old”	Extroverted Thinking	Segmenting, organising for efficiency, and systematising

The analogy of a car is a useful model when thinking about cognitive functions. The first function is the ‘driver’ of the personality type and is the function from which perspective of all of the other functions follow. It provides the direction and speed. The second function is the ‘co-pilot’, which navigates around or through any difficulties encountered. The inferior, or 3 year old, function attempts to distract both primary and secondary functions whereas the tertiary function, or ‘10 year old’, only distracts the current dominant function.

Understanding cognitive functions is imperative to understanding type. The four-letter dichotomies cannot possibly explain the complexity of our personalities – we are all thinkers, feelers, sensors and intuitives in various situations. The cognitive functions allow us to understand when we use each function and how it impacts our decision-making process.

The Cognitive Functions

Role	Process	Snapshot
Ne	Extroverted Intuition	How do concepts happen outside me?
Ni	Introverted Intuition	How do concepts happen within me?
Fe	Extroverted Feeling	How does this make others feel?
Fi	Introverted Feeling	Experiencing and acting in the immediate context
Te	Extroverted Thinking	How does this logically affect things?
Ti	Introverted Thinking	How does this logically affect me?
Se	Extroverted Sensing	How is the environment outside me?
Si	Introverted Sensing	How is the environment inside me?

CONCLUSION

ISFP Artists are harmonious, kind and sensitive to the feelings of others. They yearn for freedom to create and express themselves.

Their greatest gift is their desire to help and contribute to the well-being of others.

What is MBTI?

Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI) is a tool that helps people gain insights about themselves and how they interact with others—and improve how they communicate, learn, and work.

Often referred to as a ‘personality test’, MBTI actually has less to do with one’s personality and everything to do with how their brain works from receiving and processing external information to communication preferences. These preferences are split into four pairs – I/E, S/N, F/T and J/P. Though everyone is unique and will have some traits of all 8 letters, people will often be more inclined towards one letter in each pair. By determining your preference in each group, and putting these four letters together, you get your personality type code – for you, this is ISFP.

ISFP – The Artist What does that mean?

- Introverted Energised by quiet time alone
- Sensing Pays attention to facts and details
- Feeling Prioritises people and emotions
- Perceiving Prefers freedom and flexibility

ISFP Artists live in the present and yearn for freedom. They are artistic, aesthetically inclined and sensitive. They are happiest when they are being creative and expressing themselves. They are loyal, warm and private. ISFPs are cooperative and adaptable. They seek the balance between closeness and independence.

ISFPs are gentle caretakers who live in the present moment and enjoy their surroundings with cheerful, low-key enthusiasm. They are flexible and spontaneous, and like to go with the flow to enjoy what life has to offer. ISFPs are quiet and unassuming, and may be hard to get to know. However, to those who know them well, the ISFP is warm and friendly, eager to share in life’s many experiences.

ISFPs have a strong aesthetic sense and seek out beauty in their surroundings. They are attuned to sensory experience, and often have a natural talent for the arts. ISFPs especially excel at manipulating objects, and may wield creative tools like paintbrushes and sculptor’s knives with great mastery.

ISFP personality types are true artists, but not necessarily in the typical sense where they’re out painting happy little trees. Often enough though, they are perfectly capable of this. Rather, it’s that they use aesthetics, design and even their choices and actions to push the limits of social convention. ISFPs enjoy upsetting traditional expectations with experiments in beauty and behaviour – chances are, they’ve expressed more than once the phrase “Don’t box me in!”

Strengths

- Charming –ISFPs are relaxed and warm, and their “live and let live” attitude naturally makes them likable and popular.
- Sensitive to Others – ISFPs easily relate to others’ emotions, helping them to establish harmony and good will, and minimise conflict.
- Imaginative – Being so aware of others’ emotions, ISFP personalities use creativity and insight to craft bold ideas that speak to people’s hearts.
- Passionate – Beneath ISFPs’ quiet shyness beats an intensely feeling heart.
- Curious – Ideas are well and good, but ISFPs need to see and explore for themselves whether their ideas ring true.
- Artistic – ISFPs are able to show their creativity in tangible ways and with stunning beauty. Whether writing a song, painting an emotion, or presenting a statistic in a graph, ISFPs have a way of visualising things that resonates with their audience.

Weaknesses

- Fiercely Independent – Freedom of expression is often ISFPs’ top priority. Anything that interferes with that, like traditions and hard rules, creates a sense of oppression for ISFP personalities.
- Unpredictable – ISFPs’ dislike long-term commitments and plans.
- Easily Stressed – ISFPs live in the present, full of emotion. When situations get out of control, they can shut down, losing their characteristic charm and creativity in favour of gnashing teeth.
- Overly Competitive – ISFPs can escalate small things into intense competitions, turning down long-term success in their search for glory in the moment, and are unhappy when they lose.
- Fluctuating Self-Esteem – It’s demanded that skills be quantified, but that’s hard to do with ISFPs’ strengths of sensitivity and artistry. ISFPs’ efforts are often dismissed, a hurtful and damaging blow, especially early in life.

Recognising the ISFP

ISFPs can be difficult to recognise because of their tendency to express themselves through action rather than words. They may initially appear distant or aloof, but if you watch closely, you can observe their caring in the thoughtful things they do for others. They are carefully observant of the practical needs of other people, and often step in with quiet, unassuming assistance at just the moment it is needed. ISFPs prefer to take a supportive role and are rarely assertive or demanding of attention. They are typically tolerant and accepting of others.

ISFPs have finely tuned artistic sensibilities. They're sensitive to colour, texture, and tone, and often have an innate sense of what will be aesthetically pleasing. They're often naturals when it comes to arranging something artistically, and enjoy the process of taking in the sensations around them. ISFPs focus mostly on the experiences of the present moment, and are rarely ambitious, preferring instead to enjoy the simple pleasures of life: friends, family, and sensory delights such as food, music, and art.

"That's the thing about introverts; we wear our chaos on the inside where no one can see it."

Michaela Chung | The Irresistible Introvert

Career

ISFPs want to make a contribution through their skills and abilities. They enjoy helping others. They are agreeable and easy to get along with. ISFPs are skilled at using tools and with problem solving. They are artistic and thrive when they are given the freedom to create. ISFPs like variety in their work. They yearn for compliments on their performance.

As subordinates: ISFPs don't like to be controlled, and this can be quite clear in subordinate positions – they loathe being micromanaged. Not well-known for their long-term focus, but rather for their adaptability and spontaneity, they'll use unconventional methods, sometimes risky ones, and consider existing rules as just someone else's way of doing things. To manage ISFP personalities successfully, there need to be clearly set goals, and otherwise an open sandbox.

As colleagues: Among peers, ISFPs feel most comfortable. Working with equals and giving some advice in order to solve practical problems is right where ISFP personalities like to be. While they may exhaust themselves if their role requires an excessive amount of social interaction, they are otherwise quite charming and have excellent networking skills.

As managers: The position that feels most unnatural to ISFPs is management. They take no joy in exerting control over others, planning long-term goals, or disciplining unsatisfactory behaviour. But just because it feels a little strange, doesn't mean ISFP personalities aren't good at it.

Career Matches

- Artist
- Carpenter
- Teacher
- Chef
- Paediatrician
- Clerical Supervisor
- Composer
- Counsellor
- Social Worker
- Designer
- Physical Therapist
- Veterinarian
- Early Childhood Development
- Park Ranger
- Librarian
- Editor
- Musician
- Naturalist
- Nurse
- Mechanic
- Writer
- Personal Service Worker
- X-Ray Technician
- Medical Staff
- Dental Staff

Popular ISFP hobbies

- Independent athletics like skiing or swimming,
- Dance
- Craft projects.

ISFPs also enjoy entertaining in intimate groups and exploring art and nature.

My Super Power?

I can look you dead in the face while you're talking and not hear a damn thing you said.

Relationships

Considerate and accepting, the ISFP often looks for common ground with others. ISFPs shy away from conflict or criticism, preferring harmonious, spontaneous interactions that allow them to be helpful and kind.

ISFPs are loyal, patient, and easygoing and, once comfortable in a relationship, are warm and affectionate. ISFPs are eager to help and quickly perceive the needs of their partners and families, and often show affection with simple, practical gestures that make their loved ones feel comfortable and well taken care of.

ISFPs are offended by people who are domineering and insensitive to other people's feelings. They dislike talking about their relationships and prefer to show they care by being helpful. They do not like feeling manipulated. They value trust and are loyal. ISFPs like to maintain harmony and are very reluctant to engage in conflict.

Kindred spirits:

ISTP, ISFJ, ESFP

Intriguing differences:

INFP, ESTP, ESFJ, ENFP

INTJ, ESTJ, ENTP and ENTJ personalities can clash and conflict with the ISFP, but may also offer the best opportunities for growth. With fundamentally different values and motivations, their strengths are the ISFP's weaknesses, and if they are able to develop a relationship, they can learn a tremendous amount from each other.

Burnout

ISFPs will become burnt out and overwhelmed if:

- they feel like they are making immoral decisions
- surrounded by people who they believe do not care about the feelings of others

ISFPs need to be around people who have a strong moral backbone- similar to the ISFP. They are perfectly accepting of people who have different opinions- as long as those people are following a path of morality.

ISFPs who are suffering from burn out, will be harsh and possible pushy. They might find themselves trying to force certain people to follow a better path, but this will likely not be successful. They might find themselves snapping at people around them, which is entirely unlike the ISFP. In order to heal and get back to themselves, the ISFP needs to take time for themselves without the presence of others.

ISFP Stressors

Change

ISFPs often do not mind the idea of change, and are excited by adventure. They dislike experiencing too much change in their personal relationships, since they take them very seriously. Change that involves the people in their lives no longer being around them, will make the ISFP unhappy. If the change simply involves their environment or lifestyle, the ISFP is often willing to see the bright side of things. They dislike if things stay the same for too long, and are excited by new experiences. ISFPs are very capable of looking whatever may come their way. They are good at going with the flow, finding that the best way to live their lives, finding that the best way to live their lives.

Famous ISFPs

- Ulysses S. Grant, U.S. President
- Dan Quayle, American Vice President
- Steven Spielberg, Filmmaker
- Doris Day, Actress, Singer
- Michael Jackson, Singer-songwriter, Dancer
- Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, Composer
- Ashton Kutcher, Actor
- Marie Antoinette, Queen of France
- Fred Astaire, Actor, Dancer
- Barbara Streisand, Singer

Fictional ISFPs

- Hobbes, Calvin and Hobbes
- Flounder, The Little Mermaid
- Manny Ribera, Scarface
- Gina Montana, Scarface
- Schroeder, Peanuts (Charlie Brown)

Your character matches:

Disney:

Snow White

Game of Thrones:

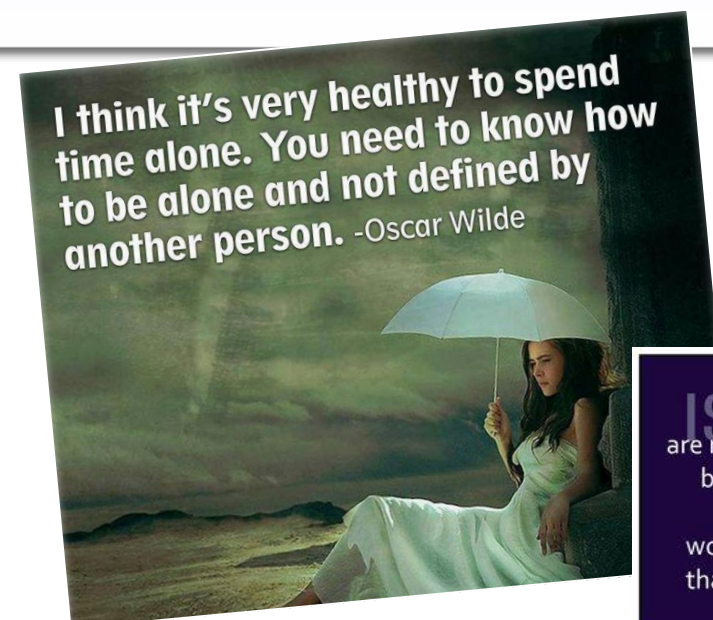

Renly Baratheon

Kristoff
Frozen

What makes ISFPs happy?

- Being allowed to be themselves freely without judgement.
- Being appreciate for who they.
- Being reminded that they are loved.
- Little surprises and gifts from the people they care about.
- Feeling carefree.
- Being with loved ones.
- The little things that many people take for granted, make the ISFP very happy.
- Good music.
- Warm rain.
- All things nature.

ISFPs are more in touch with both themselves and the world around them than any other type